Small businesswoman Kelly Chambers will run for the State House of Representatives in the 25th District.

Puyallup, WA – Local small businesswoman Kelly Chambers announced today that she will run for the State House of Representatives for the 25th District, “Our town represents the very best of what America can be. I’m running for the legislature to ensure Puyallup remains a great place to live, work and raise a family.”

Chambers is endorsed by all three current members of the 25th District, Senator Hans Zeiger, Representative Melanie Stambaugh and Representative Joyce McDonald.

Rep. Stambaugh said, “Kelly Chambers is a champion for our veterans, seniors, businesses, and families. A former educator, caregiver, and current business owner, Kelly has a broad understanding of challenges facing our community. Kelly is solution-minded and will bring people together to work for the entire 25th District. Kelly Chambers is our best choice for the House of Representatives.”

Senator Zeiger said, “Kelly Chambers understands the values of family, work, and education, and she will be a champion for these values in Olympia. Kelly leads with compassion and common sense. She’s the kind of leader we need in the State House.”

Chambers owns several businesses, including three Visiting Angels offices, a business that specializes in providing support for seniors and the disabled. She employs 270 people across two states. When elected she would be one of only a handful of job-creators in the legislature.

Chambers’ priority will be schools, “I was the first member of my family to go to college, the first to start a business and now the first to run for office. This was all possible because of my education and some fantastic teachers who changed my life,” said Chambers, “I will fight for our kids and schools to make sure every child has the education they need to succeed.”

Chambers also stressed her commitment to good jobs, “Our community needs more local jobs – we can’t expect everyone to commute to Seattle. Too few people in Olympia understand how to start a business. I can fix that!”

Together, Kelly and her husband Jeff have three grown children. Ashton works for the Mariners Organization, Savanna recently graduated from the Portland Art Institute, and Nick – recently married to Kate – is completing his computer science degree. The family enjoys big family dinners full of laughter and all of the outdoor fun Washington has to offer including jet skis, boating, and swimming. The Chambers attend Lighthouse Christian Church in Puyallup.
